A case of familial nephrotic syndrome is described in a

10-year-old boy. He was found to have mild proteinuria and hypoproteinemia and underwent a renal biopsy. Light microscopy revealed intense podocyte foot process effacement, thickened visceral epithelial cells, and few mesangial cells. Electron microscopy showed no significant change in the subepithelial foot processes of the parietal epithelium. These morphologic findings supported a diagnosis of congenital nephrotic syndrome and were supported by congenital nephrotic syndrome in the mother, who also had hypoalbuminemia. This case also showed the therapeutic response of corticosteroids in the patient. The patient was then given the diagnosis of familial nephrotic syndrome. Thus, a family history of nephrotic syndrome should be considered in cases with congenital nephrotic syndrome.
