Chimaeric receptors in which the extracellular domain of another G protein-coupled receptor (GPCR) is substituted for the ectodomain of GPCR1 were tested for their ability to activate this receptor. A receptor with a chimeric ectodomain consisting of the amino terminus plus three of the seven transmembrane domains of the beta2-adrenergic receptor displayed no detectable activity. However, a receptor with only three transmembrane segments of the beta2-adrenergic receptor showed low but detectable agonist-dependent activity, and a receptor with just the carboxyl-terminal half of the gamma2-subunit of the G protein transducin showed no activity at all. These results strongly suggest that a functional interaction between amino-terminal and transmembrane portions of the GPCR is important for normal receptor function.Q: GitHub markdown on Slack bot I found this video on "How to Post a GitHub Issue to a Slack Channel from Markdown". I'm trying to achieve the same but on the other way round. I've got a file in my Github repository (this file is hosted on GitHub, but it can be anything, it's just a file located on GitHub) and I want to send it using a Slack bot. So I created this file on GitHub and committed it. Now, when I want to send this issue, I need to set up a bot on Slack, I read and tested this code (it was working):
