We're a volunteer-led regeneration network bringing together community, business and government to create a richer, more diverse, successful place for us all to live, work and play. It's about your agenda, your skills, and your contributions, and our mission is to create the first global centre of regeneration talent. We're a partnership of 5 organisations made up of the Birmingham based regeneration agencies, Trust for Birmingham Newlands, West Midlands Local Enterprise Partnership, Birmingham City Council, Midland Metropolitan and West Midlands Combined Authority. We've teamed up with the Design Council as part of our development, and have now released our Regeneration Birmingham Growth Plan, and here's what our Innovation and Service Delivery manager had to say about it: The Design Council is delighted to be working with Birmingham Regeneration Network on this exciting project. It is rare to find a city in such good shape that can be developed sustainably into the next decade. The five regeneration agencies and the West Midlands Local Enterprise Partnership have a wonderful opportunity to shape the city's future. We've already undertaken a competition inviting firms and individuals to submit their ideas for tackling environmental challenges in ways that will provide lasting regeneration. This is the first citywide competition which has focused on the regeneration of the city as a whole, based around the six areas in Birmingham identified as priority areas in the Vision 2020 Document, the Regeneration Plan, and the Regeneration Birmingham Growth Plan. Birmingham Regeneration Network have invited up to 100 creative businesses and individuals to submit their ideas for tackling environmental challenges in ways that will benefit the whole city, including the general public, the environment, social issues and communities. If you want to get involved, there are lots of different ways to get involved. First, check out www.regenerationbirmingham.co.uk, and then take advantage of our free, online events to find out how you can become involved in one of the workstreams. The winning idea will receive a grant of £5,000 and the opportunity to present to

Insights from the Dutch hospital sector. In the Netherlands, pharmacists and general practitioners cooperate on a health-care level in the dispensing of drugs, but the drug trade is in any case far removed from ordinary business. The different segments of pharmaceutical sales, as present in the USA, are absent in the Netherlands, and the subject of ordinary business can only be dealt with in a specialist setting. Consequently, the current drug store, which is still used by the majority of the Dutch population, is no standardised complex, the manner in which it is sold and its sale costs are in fact comparable to those of the second major segment. This article concentrates on the Dutch drug store of today and the expectation of it being transformed into a retail store that competes with other retail stores. The differentiation of the pharmaceutical market is described in terms of its evolution. Possible reasons for the current low sales figures for the drug store are identified, and measures which could be taken to accelerate the transformation of the drug store are discussed.Q:

Wait for values to be updated in a shared array I'm a newbie in T-SQL, so forgive my ignorance. This is probably a stupid question, but I have a table of office locations, and I'm trying to write a script that retrieves the assigned location of the current user. I have a table with a list of offices and I'm trying to find an easy way to get the primary office location of the logged-in user (i.e. right now the user goes to www.domain.com, and a window pops up showing office X, Y, Z. They click close, and the next time they open up the website, the location X, Y, Z is taken from the database). In MySQL, I would probably write a little script that would iterate through each row of the table, and check whether or not the "location" attribute is already updated. In T-SQL, I'm using the GetUserName function to get the name of the user logged in to the database, but I'm not sure of a way
