Customer Reviews A great game but be warned, you have to jump in and don't come back, there's no getting past this point 5 by AlecF2009 Gave me something to really chew on, and also gives me hope for the future of the genre 5 by SandraG3 I can see ELDERBORN becoming the new Zelda or Firewatch of this generation, and as such, this is an awesome gaming experience 4 by LadyPv A bit too short but nonetheless enjoyable. It's a nice change to the "grind your way to a final boss and win" ending these days, which is nice. 5 by uhoj22 Always something new and challenging in this game. It's hard but still keep you engrossed in the story. Highly recommend this game to people. 5 by jameslovecraft1

0 / 10.00Game EA Star Wars Battlefront 2 What do you get when you put an established sci-fi world together with a team of 70+ developers and 2 studios, tons of content and characters from multiple eras and untold amounts of Star Wars history? The answer is you get one of the most exciting, in-depth Star Wars games of all time, that is if you're a Star Wars fan like us here at FGC! The game's story follows the adventures of the Resistance, led by General Leia Organa as she works her way to destroy the evil Galactic Empire in the Battle of Endor, while you take the role of one of the game's commanders and lead the attack on the Empire forces with your starfighter. The game features a deep experience that's not just limited to space battles with special abilities and abilities specific to each character class. You can attack, heal, run, blast, rocket, jump, roll and slow your way through the game. And, it's designed to be incredibly customizable, allowing players to create their own pilots and accessorize them with custom equipment to create their own unique character. The one thing missing, as many will note, is the single-player campaign. We've definitely heard EA are working on a single-player campaign for the game. And, on a personal note, I'm not sure why you needed to put "and a single player campaign is coming in the future" in the headline. graduated academics will be offered an exemption from the new "suicide clause" imposed by universities, provided they sign a pledge to seek employment. The National Union of Students (NUS) has campaigned for the policy change, which is expected to start in the autumn of this year. The clause, which is designed to combat the issue of stress and suicide, is a legal requirement for those who receive financial support from the Student Finance Agency. But NUS president Aaron Porter said in a letter sent to all universities earlier this week that the suicide clause contained in its new constitution is "unnecessary". He added that the union is "concerned that the effect of the suicide clause upon the mental health and wellbeing of graduates can be disproportionate". The clause states that those who are unable to find work are prohibited from applying for further student support for the rest of their degree. The union is asking universities to allow graduating students to sign a waiver so they are not held to the clause. This is because graduate salaries are not guaranteed by the university, unlike undergraduate ones, and will fluctuate depending on future employment. In 2016, the Association of Graduate Guardian Officers (AGGO) published statistics that showed 50 per cent of graduate workers' salaries have fallen by up to 30 per cent since graduating. According to the data, 87 per cent of students who graduated in 2016 were unable to find graduate-level work due to the low value of their degrees. In response to Mr Porter's letter, three institutions - Cardiff University, Queen Mary University of London and the University of Glasgow - have
