

FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology”, an innovation that uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. The depth of this new way of playing has to be seen to be believed. This is a true football simulation experience, but thanks to the powerful motion capture technology, we can go even deeper. We will use the collected data to radically change how we measure player performance and how we present it. How it works This is the world of an authentic football simulation - you have the ball at your feet, it is yours, you have to control it. The ultimate goal is to get to the end of the match. Not in the traditional way, but in the way a football match is played in real life. We have to put motion capture suits on all the players in order to capture every movement they make. Thanks to motion capture technology, we’ll be able to observe every single aspect of the football match. The data collected will be used to power FIFA 22 gameplay, such as: Tactics: This is the new way to play the most popular sport in the world with players’ actual skills. In addition to new tactics available for every position, we will also have the tools to make the most intelligent decisions using the information collected and not just from the results of the past matches. This is the new way to play the most popular sport in the world with players’ actual skills. In addition to new tactics available for every position, we will also have the tools to make the most intelligent decisions using the information collected and not just from the results of the past matches. Physical and Technical Skills: How players perform with the ball at their feet is a performance not only in football but in reality. We’ll use the data captured from the players’ true movements to assess their overall technical skills. Physical attributes, the types of skills they actually show when playing the sport, will play a vital role in the new way of playing, such as being a great dribbler, not only in the simulation, but also in real life.
