North Korea on Thursday announced its second nuclear test, a month after its first atomic blast, AFP reported. North Korea announced on Thursday that it had conducted a nuclear test at a site near its northern border town of Punggye-ri. The announcement came in a brief government statement, which warned of further nuclear tests. It gave no more details. The US said it was "concerned" by the announcement, while China, the country's most important ally, urged the Pyongyang regime to "stop all acts to test" the system, in a statement issued through state television. Earlier in the day, top North Korean nuclear negotiator Kim Myong Gil told journalists that "the testing will be stopped before it advances to its final phases" and that "it will definitely be proven to be a H-bomb. The testing has been done and the guarantee of safety is very high." The announcement comes a month after Pyongyang tested a nuclear device. It's likely that the North also made the announcement to distract attention from the April launch of a long-range rocket, which the U.S. and its allies regard as a test of ballistic missile technology. The UN Security Council convened an emergency meeting at the United

- New carrier models - New standard versions - New dark colors - New options - New cloth schemes

Customers can personalize their aircraft by choosing their preferred paint colors and a unique fabric on the belly, tail fin and one of the aircraft windows. It is also possible to choose an individual cockpit sticker. No special skill is required. Each paint and fabric scheme can also be customized further using a variety of decal options. The cockpit design will also vary based on the paint and fabric options, allowing you to create a truly individual and unique aircraft. All passengers, whether they are on a short or long-haul flight, will enjoy the new cabin, which features more spacious seats and, for short-haul flights, a new stretched galley, which can now also accommodate 10 passengers for the first time. The new interior includes the first-ever 13 inch touch-screen in the industry on the aircraft galley, which improves meal selection for all customers. Passengers can also personalize their aircraft using stickers, which are applied using a laser printer onto the upper and lower surfaces of the aircraft. The stickers, which are located around the aircraft, also include an audio announcement of the status of the aircraft - take-off, approach, stop or landing, etc. For the first time ever, aircraft manufacturers can display an LED countdown of passenger boarding and alighting and a unique boarding light sequence for each aircraft model. The content of this DLC was sponsored by Boeing

What's new in FlyWings 2018 - Boeing 777 Family:

- Dreamliner and Project Flight 777R on Friday 12/13/2018
The Boeing 777 is the best selling Dreamliner family member with over 5,000 delivered airliners since entering service in 1995. A third iteration of the popular airliner was unveiled at the Paris Air Show in June 2005 and initially delivered in November 2008. The new 777X will offer passengers a wide range of cabin options, increase the range of the plane, offer more fuel-efficient engines and feature improvements in aerodynamics and passenger comfort. The 777X will be manufactured at Boeing's final assembly line in Puget Sound, Washington, resulting in up to a three percent increase in production productivity compared to the current 777, the company said. At the same time, the 777X will be offered as a freighter and the Dreamliner as a passenger plane. The -Family We know from days of flying time ago about the success of the -family but while the availability of the previous -Family only grew during the past years one of the main objectives of the -Family is to deliver content in flight. The co-pilot on board sees the instrument display but we only have the cabin crew to report about things that takes place before in the cockpit. With the -Family this might change and could be the first plane that offers more of the day-to-day working steps in front of the passengers. The 777-9 The new -Family with features that might be most widely similar to the previous -Family. A second -Family will be developed to be certified around 2021 and will be available in very specific demand areas. Boeing announced an estimate of the wingspan of the 787-9, which is to have a nine-abreast fuselage, will be 274 feet. Boeing CEO Dennis Muilenburg said the company's board of directors will grant approval for the development of the 787-9.

Muilenburg said pilot training - is also coming on schedule, with the program due to begin certifications next year. The board also said the flight-control software for the 787-9 will be certified next year. The company recently handed over the first certification simulator to the employees of the certification company, and Boeing has trained 2,000 employees in it. The first delivery for the new 2017 edition of airplane is planned to take place next year. It will be the first to the company
