It's a free game developed in many months by a single person, who never finished developing a proper sequel to it. This game is great and deserves to have a sequel, but I don't do it myself. That's why I'm asking you for help. This is not a Zombie, this is not a Horror, this is not a survival game. It's the game about the girl, who is the only survivor of the epidemic. She stays in the classroom, waiting for the time when she can go home. If you pass the windows and can hear the birds then the time is almost over. There is no town, no life, no light. No one left to see if you saved the world or not. Is it your first time? Use guide/recommendations/look around buttons at the bottom. There are no monsters or enemies. You are playing as the only survivor. You can leave this room by opening doors in the classroom (two doors are locked by a pin). You will meet many girls in this classroom. If you talk to them and manage to have them like you, they will marry you and you can leave the classroom. You can't save anybody, but you can help. If you successfully save them, they will never lose hope that they could be loved. If you do something bad to them, they will stay in the class room forever (but they won't remember their past life). Try to help everybody who is so innocent and cute. It's okay, you won't get a heart attack if you don't achieve this. No flashbacks in the game, no blood or gore. You won't die in the game. You will see how everyone reacts to a certain situation. There is no ending I just want to see what would happen if you just stay alone in this classroom. If you find it interesting, you can change this option It's really easy, so you won't have any problems. It's not a horror

It is known that spatial modes for single spatial mode operation of laser sources are well defined in terms of fundamental mode (FM) and high order modes (HOM) characteristics. The FM is defined by the optical power distribution among several modes while HOMs are defined by how power is distributed among individual modes. In free space and most other optical systems, modes tend to be more or less randomly coupled together and be evenly distributed

What's new:

487 The history of Tiger fighters In the summer of 1930 Kenneth McArthur was warned by a friend that the A.V.M. (Aviation Design and Construction Company) Lance Armstrong, now the designer of the famous Fairey Battles, would like to meet him in London. Ken McArthur and Armstrong were both on leave from the Royal Air Force where McArthur was Deputy Assistant Director of Air Engineering at the Central Technical College, Farnborough. Their meeting led to a joint project being planned and, as a result, the Armstrong McQueen was born. Armstrong felt he had a design that would fit in with all the aircraft developments going on around him. Flight magazine later dubbed the Armstrong McQueen "a true home built machine". The story of the Armstrong McQueen begins in early 1930 when Bill Allard invited McArthur to the A.V.M. Farnborough Experimental Bomber and Reconnaissance Wing. Now only weeks away from taking leave from the RAF, McArthur went to the A.V.M. at Farnborough. Also attending was John A.D. McQueen (Armstrong), who had been selected by Jack Long (founder, Christman Lancaster) as one of the designers to take charge of the 50-plane Long Raid Bomber Programme. They later arranged to meet at A.V.M. Long's offices at their base on the Kingston by-pass to go through the designs of the crews of the 50 Long Raid Bombers. Allard's conversation with McQueen continued over a glass of beer in the A.V.M. pub, and soon afterwards Ken McArthur left for Belfast, where at the Central Technical College he started production of Tiger fighters with his girlfriend the future Irish beauty Sonia Leigh. Kenneth Armstrong said " at that point development of my new design effectively began". The original wings of the Armstrong McQueen were taken from the Bat (Wight FW.1), Armstrong had flown the Bat many times and it was a favourite with A.V.M pilots. After initial de tails from the Bat wings a prototype was built with a Tiger tail unit that had been designed by George Murrell. Ken Armstrong insists that his tail unit and wing design was altered twice by Sidney Camm and that he took no part in the design. Soon afterwards a prototype Fairey
