Creature Evolution Creature evolution is one of the core mechanics that we have added to Creature Evolution. As a player, you can evolve your creatures into new and better ones as you discover more about them. There are different ways to evolve a creature. A player can evolve a creature by spending experience points on them. When a player spends experience points on a creature, it will evolve into a new stage. * Evolution Rate Per Level: In Creature Evolution, the evolution rate per level is set to 1%. This means that when a player spends experience points to evolve a creature, there is a 50% chance that it will get better and a 50% chance that it will get worse. * Evolution Points Players also have the ability to use Evolution Points to evolve their creatures. Evolution Points are earned in-game by slaying monsters and by finding Evolution Stones. Evolution stones are found while exploring dungeons. Each stone can be used to evolve a creature into a better form. Like experience points, when a player uses up all their Evolution Points, there is a 50% chance that the evolved creature will be better, and a 50% chance it will get worse. When Evolution Points go away, the creatures will go back to their original forms. * Variant Creature Evolution Players can also use Non-Regular Evolution Points to evolve their creatures. Unlike regular Evolution Points, each Non-Regular Evolution Point will give players a chance to get a specific variant of their creature. For example, instead of getting a different lizard creature, you could choose to evolve your lizard creature into a speedier lizard creature. * Evolution Ability Leveling Evolution Points and Non-Regular Evolution Points can be used to evolve your creatures into more powerful ones. To use the Evolution Points, you need to level up the ability of your creature. When a player levels up a creature, the creature will gain experience and Evolution Points. As a player uses experience to level up a creature, it will also gain higher stats. The stats of creatures will go up by a whole level, plus they will get one point for every level they gain. So if a creature has 40% damage, it will get +20 damage plus +1 for every level. This means that as a player levels up their creature, it will get better and better. There are six difficulty levels for creature evolution: Easy, Normal, Tough, Hard, Extra-Hard and Extreme. Each of these levels will provide higher stats to your creatures. Each level will also provide more Evolution Points and Non-
