I am the creature, the being of the Elden Ring. The forest was the cradle of the Elderlings who made the world wonderful. The Elden Ring was their treasure, and they made pilgrims travel great distances to reach it. Their greatest treasure was the Ring, and it was lost in all but a single hand. In the lands of Tarlow, the time came when their world was destroyed. The lands of the Elderlings and the darkness of the void swept away most of the true inhabitants. No more Elderlings remained, and not even one of them had the power to create the Stone of the Elderlings. And the world beyond the lands of the Elderlings was desolate. But the lands of the Elderlings became a haven to the remnants of the world of the Elderlings. The left one-third of the world of the Elderlings that escaped the void formed a new world of endless wilderness and verdant valleys, called the Lands Between. And the surviving Elderlings gave them a strength and a new language, which they call Eldarin. Twenty years passed. And then a vanguard of the people of the Elderlings came to a new land that was called Tarlow. The place was across a sea that was like a lake, and the place was covered by a forest unlike any other. From the depths of the forested land, the people built a great citadel, and they called it Sunstone Tower. It was the one place that was fit for the remnant of the Elderlings to spend their time in. They brought with them a world that was dead, and hoped to bring back some of their wisdom with them. From the beginning, they barely survived, but life in the cities was much better than in the wild. The people of the Elderlings that lived in the Sunstone Tower were optimistic. Their world that was dead was being renewed from within. As the years went by, the people of the Eldarin lived much the same life of their ancestors, but now there was greater diversity. Now the Eldarin had to face new threats that they had not known before. A
