How to load data into a Plotly chart using a loop I am trying to load data from a MySQL table into a Plotly chart using a loop that would update the plot. I am using the following code: import plotly.plotly as py from plotly.figure_factory import make_subplots from plotly.offline import plot import mysql.connector import matplotlib.pyplot as plt fig = make_subplots(rows=1, cols=2) df=pd.read_sql_query('SELECT * FROM {{data_table}}', conn) fig.add_trace(df.iloc[:10]) for _, i in df.iterrows(): fig.add_trace(pd.DataFrame({'x': i['x']}, index= i['x']).T) plt.show() This is not loading data correctly into the chart. The goal is to load the data into a series of subplots that I can update as the data changes. What is happening is that the loop is updating the same subplot over and over again. How can I load the data correctly into the various subplots? I have tried the following solutions from stackoverflow, as well as many other threads on the topic. Plotly - Interactive plotting Plotly - How to load multiple traces or (subplots) with a loop for a large data set? Plotly - How to plot multiple subplots? Plotly - Update chart as table is updated A: You can do everything you'd like with the interactive figure you make. In the example below, I'm taking data and showing the data in a subplot for every value in a 10x10 grid. When I click on one of the subplots, it turns red (and eventually disappears).
