

October 16, 2013 "Today it is unbelievable to imagine that in 1969 humans landed on the moon using a computer with 32 kilobytes of memory. 220 pages were printed on paper, stapled and placed in an envelope and then in a folder. And all this in order to prepare a report for NASA on the successful results of the mission. Moreover, there is not a single computer file in the folder! This is not surprising, since the technology was not yet mature enough. However, at the time, this technique may have seemed like a real breakthrough, reducing the amount of work that scientists and engineers had to do to an unimaginable size."
