this book is the third in a series of books intended to teach the basics of revit software. in the first book, the author covered all the basics of the revit interface, created a simple model, and showed how to view, navigate, and edit the model. the second book focused on creating a basic building model in the revit interface. this book builds upon the first two books and provides an in-depth exploration of the concepts and tools found in revit. the book consists of 12 chapters and contains more than 30 real-world examples. the chapters include: a tour of revit, designing and creating buildings in revit, working with the model browser, designing walls, adding windows, doors, and roofs, using revit for site design, using revit for space planning, using revit for building documentation, using revit for power design, using revit for site management, a tour of the ribbon, using revit for project management, and working with standards. using the tools in this class, we will create a simple floor plan, a box, and a wall. then we will create a building with multiple floors and view it from many different angles. in this hands-on lab, you will learn to use basic tools in revit architecture to create a simple house model. you will also learn how to view the model in various orthographic views and how to create custom views. you will learn the tools available in the view tab, how to work in 3d, and how to create views from simple geometry and from building models. this course also teaches you how to import 2d and 3d drawings and how to integrate those drawings into your revit model. you will learn to use both the detail and design tab to create a good looking model, and you will also learn to use the document options to create a binder page. finally, you will learn how to create a navigation model that will help you navigate through a 3d building model. in this hands-on lab, you will learn how to create a simple model using revit architecture 2014 tools and techniques.

revit architecture is an autodesk revit software product that combines the power of building information modeling (bim) with the power of the parametric design toolset. this course will teach you about the architecture capabilities of revit, and take you through a series of hands-on exercises that will help you apply what you learn to your own projects. if you are new to revit architecture, this workshop will get you started with the product. but if youve been using revit for a while, take a look at this new product to see if you can finally get the job done in one place. the course will start with a brief overview of the interface, and go on to cover the new features in revit architecture 2014. we will explore the new 3d visualization and workflows; the ability to break apart your model for further editing; and the new building information modeling (bim) tools. along the way, we will look at how to create entire buildings, rooms, and even the foundations in revit. we will also look at how to use the dynamic content toolset to design and print floor plans. this course will also help you understand how to:

the goal of this class is to give you a solid foundation for autodesk revit software. if you are a beginner or you need to improve your revit skills, this class is for you. this long-format class is all about getting you hands-on with autodesk revit software. youll work through a series of tasks and learn how to
